

The Living Classroom

...bringing learning to life at the Habitat Survival Centre, Henley-in-Arden, Warwickshire

About us

Habitat Survival Trust seeks to raise awareness in children from local communities that by caring for the environment at home, a world of difference can be made.

Recent projects include planting 2000 indigenous trees at our centre in Henley-in-Arden and transforming dense coppice into a nature trail at a local primary school. We offer workshops concerning all aspects of Habitat and dependant wildlife and do our best to be sensitive in approach, because a youngster's window on the natural world is often an untidy patch of wilderness, where a host of incredible life-forms can survive and flourish.

For a curious child, encouraged to go with rather than against nature, a wealth of wonder exists in a small pile of logs, an upturned plant pot and a sprinkle of wild flowers.

Life for a child is a journey of wonder and discovery.

Educational fun in a living classroom

Activities include habitat conservation awareness, pond-dipping, river studies, woodland exploration and classification of species, most of which are directed towards KS1 and KS2 pupils.

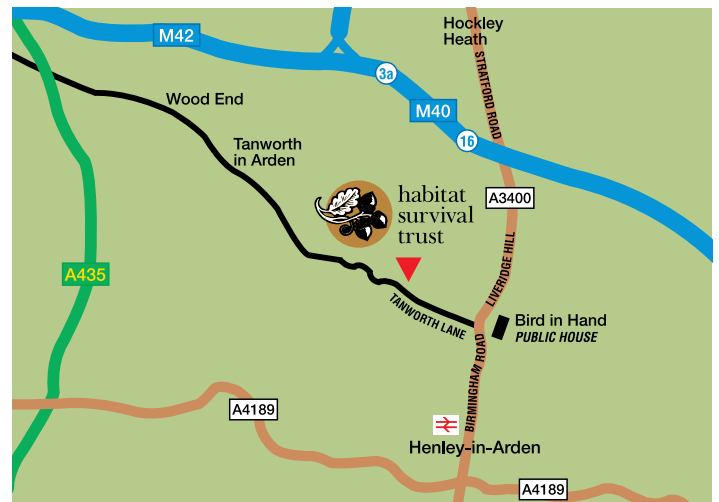

The Habitat Survival Workshop

Habitat Survival Trust has recently completed a purpose-built classroom with toilet facilities and wheelchair access.

The building is located in 12 acres of woodland and grassland, has direct access to the tributary River Alne, nature trails for walking and a flourishing wildlife pond. Our modern classroom is equipped with the latest audio-visual technology, where children can benefit from individual discovery as well as group and field-work studies in a safe and natural environment.

It is important to add that visits can be tailored to the specific requirements of teachers to complement and extend National Curriculum topic work in Geography, Science and Citizenship, plus Personal, Social and Health Education.

All visits to the Habitat Survival Trust Workshop are free.

Visiting us

Habitat Survival Trust Centre is situated in the beautiful Alne Valley, close to Henley-in-Arden, Warwickshire, and is easily accessible from the M40 and M42.

From the Stratford-upon-Avon to Birmingham road (A3400), turn into Tanworth Lane at the Bird-in-Hand public house. The workshop is situated a half mile on the right hand side of the lane after a long laurel hedge.

Parking for several cars/minibus is available close to the classroom, with further parking in the adjacent field.

Habitat Survival Trust

Corfields, Tanworth Lane, Henley-in-Arden B95 5QZ

Teachers are encouraged to pay a preliminary visit to the workshop to discuss and plan their school trip.

For further information or to discuss your visit, contact Molly Corfield

Telephone 01564 794651

Email info@habitatsurvival.org.uk

www.habitatsurvival.org.uk

